

Overview

Selling & Account Development in today's competitive growth sectors is complex. Buyers demand that the sales person acts as a market specialist rather than simply an 'order taker' and suppliers are being forced to 'chase' their own markets

This course will emphasise the professional, people-to-people elements of selling - Advanced Communication Skills, Building (and maintaining) Relationships, Sales Planning and Pipeline Development, Projecting The Company 'Brand' and understanding the importance of being seen as 'The Trusted Advisor' rather than 'order takers'.

Most importantly, the course examines the sales process from the buyers' viewpoint, and concentrates on having clarity as to what the decision criteria is within each sales opportunity.

By the end of the course delegates will be able to:

- Adopt a systematic and strategic approach to gaining new business.
- Understand the skills required for success in very competitive markets.
- Develop an 'Account Development' approach to selling.
- Understand and use qualification.
  - Be better able to recognise and influence the decision criteria (why people buy).
- Be better able to recognise additional sales possibilities and opportunities.
  - Be more self-disciplined in setting sales objectives and forecasting.
